Wegener Adaptive Growth Fund Hits All Time High with Three Year Average Annual Total Return Of 11.43%

Fund exemplifies the opportunities for a more active risk management approach

(September 22, 2009) Alexandria, VA – At a time when most stock mutual funds are missing their mark or are merely recovering last year’s losses, the Wegener Adaptive Growth Fund (Nasdaq: WAGFX) is up 38.36% cumulative over the three year period ending on September 18, 2009, and is making new all time highs.

This extraordinary return was accomplished by hedging the Fund when the market risk level appeared high, and removing those hedges as conditions shifted and expected market return increased.

According to fund manager Steven Wegener, “an active process for risk management should be a core aspect of any investment portfolio. Traditionally, this has been achieved by having investors use multiple funds to try to manage their risk. The alternative approach – to hire a fund manager who will be more active about managing the risk in the portfolio – represents the investment wave of the future.”

Wegener continues: “However, successful risk management where equity exposure is varied requires patience and skill. Not all managers can do so successfully, and it’s important to look to the manager’s track record of being able to manage through both bull and bear markets.”

In Wegener’s case, his approach has led to the Fund being ranked in the top 1% in Lipper’s Multi-Cap Core category and being ranked in the top 1% of Morningstar’s Large Growth category over the 1-year and 3-year periods ending on September 18, 2009.

The specific results versus the market are as follows:

Average Annual Total Returns For Periods Ended 6/30/2009

	1 year	Since Inception
Wegener Adaptive Growth Fund (Nasdaq: WAGFX)	3.36%	8.05%
S&P 500	-26.21%	-10.11%
Russell 2000	-25.01%	-10.89%
